FOREWORD

Information appearing in this directory is a product of the Lake and Stream Classification Project of the Bureau of Fish Management, Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, pursued according to Section 23.09(2)(M), Wisconsin Statutes. This project involved field inventories of the surface waters of Wisconsin and was completed between 1958 and 1974. In addition to the contributors listed above, many people too numerous to mention here made substantial contributions to the data-gathering effort. These people are acknowledged individually in earlier reports and it is regretted that they can not be acknowledged more fully here.

The purpose of the directory is to provide a quick reference for determining the location of a given lake and the correct spelling of the lake name. Every effort has been made to use official names based on decisions of the Wisconsin State Geographic Names Council published through February, 1976, and names listed on United States Geological Survey Maps. However, some small lakes that have not been officially named were assigned names based on local usage to reduce the high number of unnamed lakes.

INTRODUCTION

Anyone working with Wisconsin lakes soon realizes the enormity of the subject matter. A total of 14,949 inland lakes have been documented covering almost one million surface acres. Because lakes are so numerous in Wisconsin, they are hard to keep track of and it is often difficult to find information on a lake unless its location is known. To make things easier for people working with lakes, the Wisconsin Lakes Directory was developed as a reference aid. All named lakes are listed in alphabetical order and accompanied by their grid location and county. These named lakes number 5,695 and account for 95% of all lake surface acreage. Unnamed lakes are not listed because they have little meaning in an alphabetical listing. However, information on unnamed lakes as well as more detailed information on named lakes is available on a county basis in the Department's Surface Water Resources Publication Series and the Wisconsin Lakes Publication. Information on the size and depth of Wisconsin lakes is summarized at the end of this directory.

USING THE DIRECTORY

The directory is meant to be used much as you would use a telephone directory. To locate a particular lake in the list, first locate the appropriate alphabet section of the directory based on the first letter of the lake name. Then go through the section using each successive letter in the name as a guide until you spot the lake you are looking for. An index map illustrating the location system used in the directory is provided in Figure 1. For large lakes that cover more than one township, range, or section, only one location set is listed.

The following guidelines were used in compiling the listings and will assist you in using the directory:

- The terms lake, pond, millpond, etc., always follow the primary lake name. In cases where the term 'lake' officially precedes the primary name, it is set off by a comma. Example: Look for Winnebago, Lake rather than Lake Winnebago.
- Numbers occurring in primary lake names are spelled out and thus can be located alphabetically. Example: Look for Camp Twenty-One Lake rather than Camp 21 Lake.
- Directional adjectives such as east, west, north, south, upper, lower, and middle are placed after the primary water name and are set off by a comma. Most of these terms are used to pair nearby lakes that have the same primary name. Example: Look for Twin Lake, East and Twin Lake, West rather than East Twin Lake and West Twin Lake.
- Lakes bearing the same name are listed according to the alphabetical order of the county in which they occur. Example: Among the 74 Bass Lakes listed, the Bass Lake in Ashland County is listed first, followed by the Bass Lake in Barron County and so on down the list.
- Colloquial names are listed in parentheses after the accepted lake name. Example: Lucky Lake (Fratzke).

We sincerely hope that the Wisconsin Lakes Directory proves to be a useful reference. We recognize that some errors are inevitable because of the number of names involved and would appreciate having any called to our attention.

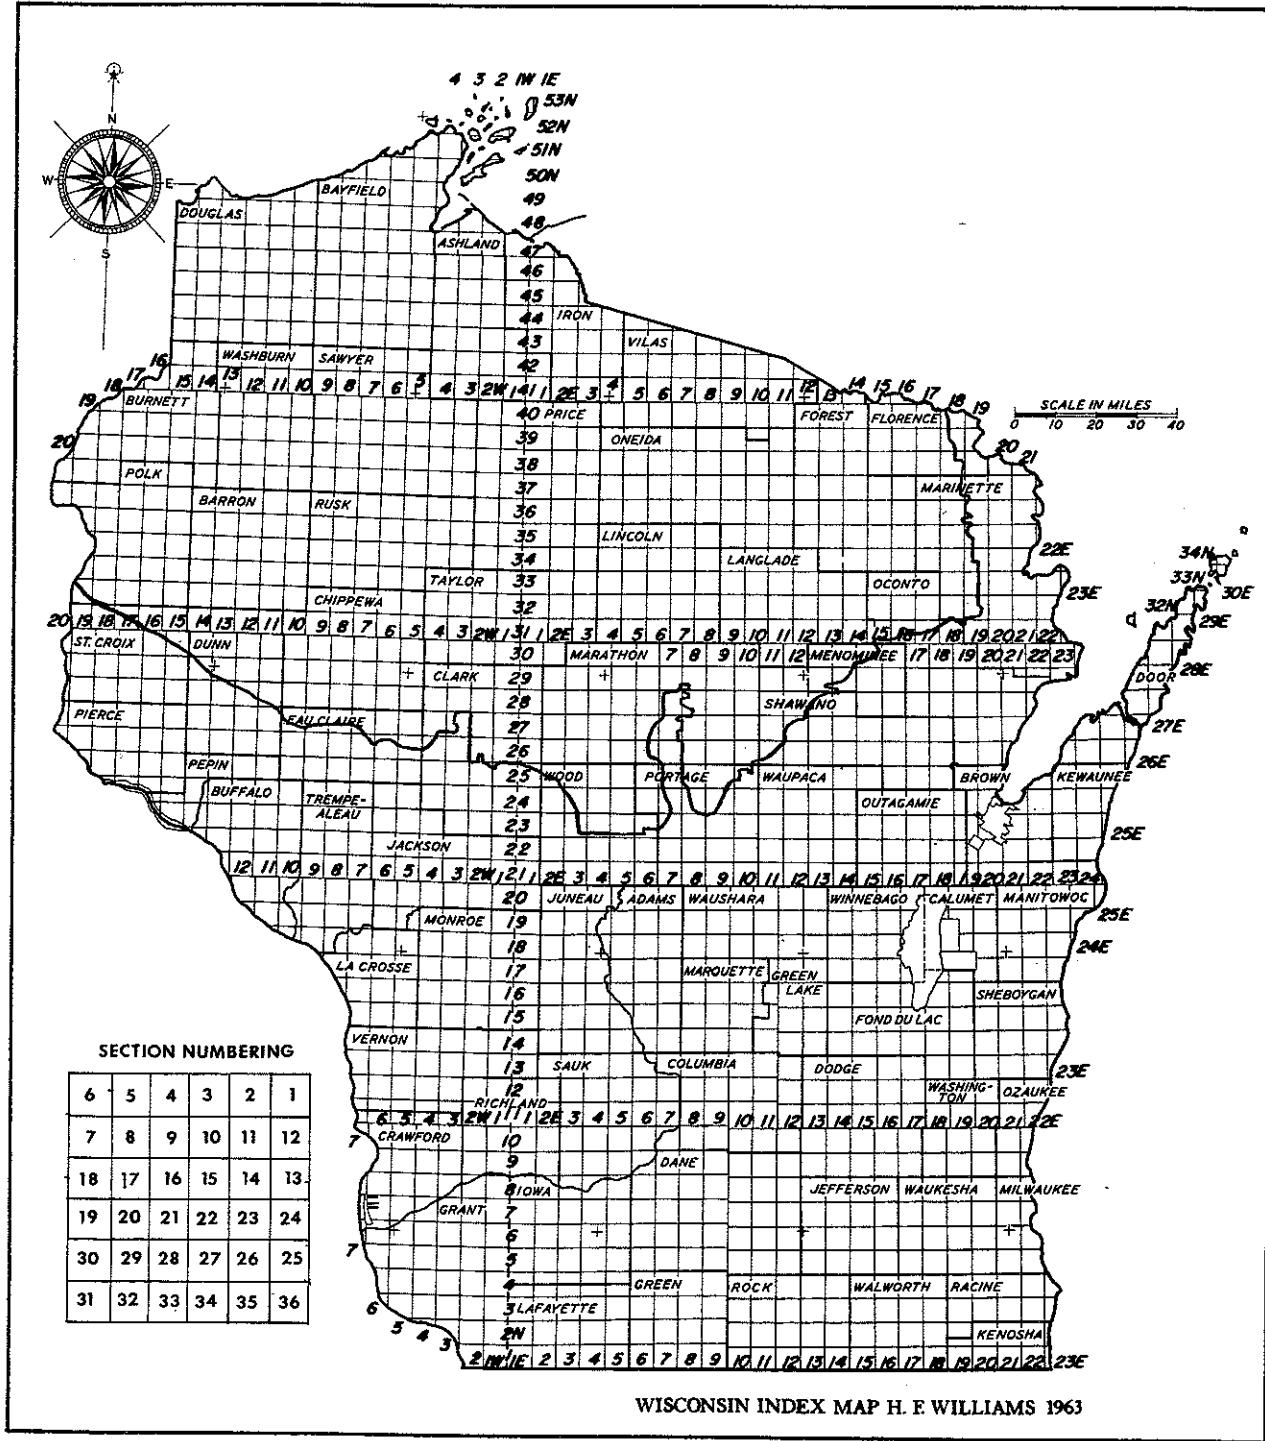

FIGURE 1. Rectangular system used to designate location of Wisconsin lakes. Townships (T) are numbered vertically and all have a north designation. Ranges (R) are numbered horizontally and may have either a west or an east designation. The small squares in the map each represent a unique township and range. These squares are divided into 36 Sections (S) which are numbered as illustrated in the inset.
